1. The enlargement of the canal at the Falls of Louisville.

2. The improvement of the Western rivers and harbors.

8. That the West may have its public buildings erected for Government purposes built in a handsome and substantial manner, as they are along the Atlantic side.

4. That there may be appointed a board or bureau of commercial statistics, whose business it shall be to present annually a systematic view of the amount and movement of commerce, manufactures, and agricultural productions.

These demands are all reasonable, and we trust they may receive the attention asked. The last proposition, however, is too limited.

The subject of the Tariff alone is worthy the exclusive attention of a bureau, and it never can be rightly comprehended by the nation until this species of aid shall be provided by the Government. A tariff can never be perfect, for the simple reason that our knowledge of the productions and demands of our own and other countries can never be perfect. But by the aid of such a bureau, knowledge upon the subject may always be obtained, arranged and digested in such manner as to guide our legislation for the welfare of the people.

The subject of agriculture is of still greater importance. This comprehends the greatest good of the human family; and if the army, the navy, the treasury, and the mail are worthy being placed under distinct departments of the Government, then does the subject of agriculture merit a great department more than all of these put together. It would prove the main pillar of our Government, and commerce and science would alike receive the greatest benefits from its establishment.

The ample materials gathered by the recent census-takers will make manifest the necessity of giving to these subjects the attention demanded by the wants of the country; and the able, skilful, and indefatigable Superintendent of the Census is doubtless prepared to demonstrate the advantages of our always possessing fresh, minute, and accurate statistics of the industry of the country.

Hitherto agriculture has received no protection or encouragement from the Government and in isolated feebleness the tillers of the soil have endeavored, by means of little societies, to do for themselves and their country what the Government should do for all. They are strong enough numerically, and intelligent enough, to demand that the Government shall do its duty in directing industry to its most promising field of reward, and to those pursuits from which the country may derive the most profit.

We do not disavow the doctrine of protection, and would not willingly live under a Government that would withhold it. Protection is the duty of a Government, and the laborers in every pursuit are entitled to it. We would protect property, which is only labor accumulated; and we would protect labor, which is the only source of wealth. But "the greatest good of the greatest number" should be the idea of every protectionist. The agriculturists of America are the greatest in number, and their welfare cannot, therefore, be justly overlooked. It will not do to tell them that we will protect them by protecting others, and thus creating a home market for their products. This may be true; but until farmers and planters figure it out for themselves, they never will and never ought to be satisfied. If it is true, they will make the discovery; and until they do make the discovery, they are never going to believe the figure tables of those who own stock in protected manufacturing establishments.

THE MORNON DIFFICULTIES AT SALT LAKE .-The cause of the public officers leaving the Mormons is said to be, that they denounced the Government of the United States, and called Congress a "pack of corrupt swindlers." The $20,000 appropriated by Congress for public buildings has been taken to pay off the debts of the church; and only a short time before the merchants and judges left, Brigham Young called together, secretly, the Legislature, and passed resolutions and issued orders for the seisure of twenty-four thousand dollars more from the hands of Harris, the Secretary. Harris persisted in retaining it; and only by the to which they belong; but if they are not to use of an injunction by the Supreme Court was be apprehended and punished, our laws are but he able to do so, and get away with the money. This union of spiritual with governmental affairs half of our fires originate in the wicked incenis likely to get the Mormons into trouble. Northern Mexico. We learn by a despatch from New Orleans dated the 13th instant, that the brig Tehuantepec had arrived there from the Rio Grande, with later and important advices from northern Mexico. At last accounts, the insurgents had made a complete capture of the city of Matamoros. The place was entirely in the hands of the revolutionists. It was reported that large reinforcements had joined the revolutionists, and that they were very formidable. The most intense alarm was spreading throughout Mexico, not only on account of the insurgents, but in consequence of great disaffection among the people of the country. Extensive preparations were making on the part of the government for defence, and to put down the invaders and rebels. Orders had been issued to show them no quarters. We presume this news is correct in the main, and that the independence of the States of the Sierra Madre is near at hand. What then is to follow? The history of Texas may be condensed to tell it all.

At this moment some description of these States may not be without interest, and our readers will do well to peruse that quoted from the Pennsylvanian on our first page.

Where is A. Oakey Hall, the gentleman who communicated the letter of "An Attache" to the New York Times? The New York Morning Star says that one Mr. Revoil wrote the Marseilles letter to the New York Herald, of like tenor with that of "An Attache." Let us know all about these men. The National Intelligencer this morning evinces a disposition to clear itself of all responsibility for and approval of these letters. We are glad to see this.
